The new ThinkPad X30 is a tablet of all things. It is a tablet with a docking station as well as a touchscreen display. It has the classic ThinkPad keyboard design, has a docking station, and of course, an X30. This tablet runs Windows 7 and offers a choice of screen resolutions including 1280×800, 1024×600 and 800×600. The screen comes with IPS technology, has a diagonally viewing angle of 170 degrees, and has 16.7 million colors. The ThinkPad X30 is due to be available by the end of March, 2009 for an estimated retail price of $1499. After the ThinkPad Tablet PCs, what's next? Of course, the first question that comes to mind is, "What happens now that the ThinkPad Tablet PC has been introduced?" In the past, the ThinkPad Tablet PC has been a major topic of discussion in the Computer technology community. This past year, the ThinkPad Tablet PC has been met with a lot of critical feedback. For example, the built-in keyboard has been the cause of some serious complaints. Now, the IBM ThinkPad X30 Tablet PC will once again become the topic of hot discussion. Update: 04/01/2009 The new IBM ThinkPad X30 Tablet PC will be available for pre-order starting on April 7, 2009. For more information on the new ThinkPad X30 Tablet PC, please see our sister site, Mobile Scoop. In case you haven't heard, the new ThinkPad Tablet PC will be available by the end of the first quarter, 2009. Last week, we posted a story about the release of the ThinkPad Tablet PC. The blog post got a lot of attention and spawned a fair amount of discussion on the ThinkPad forums. There was some confusion with the ThinkPad Tablet PC and, more importantly, some confusion on the pricing of the new product. The confusion has been cleared up by IBM as the company will be releasing the new ThinkPad Tablet PC and also pricing the machine. The new machine will be priced at $699. The base model has a 1024x600 resolution, while the model with a 1280x800 display will sell for $ 82157476af
